Michael Randolph

*Marketing Specialist for Videography & Photography
January Staff Member of the Month*

Michael Randolph joined SVSU as a part-time photographer in 2013, when his keen eye and calculating focus first began bringing to life many of the defining images of the university and its community. His work promoting and documenting the university has appeared in framed photos lining campus hallways, on billboards towering over busy interstate roadways and in magazines and brochures mailed to homes throughout the U.S. After he transitioned to the full-time role of videographer last year, his filmed productions also are viewed worldwide on social media.

For a university determined to shed its status as a “best kept secret” among prospective students, Randolph’s imagery often offers the introductory glimpse of SVSU’s scenic campus to teenagers considering college. It’s a weighty responsibility. Fortunately, his skill has earned him a career decorated with awards and praise at SVSU and at newspapers where he has worked prior to joining the university.

The Cadillac native’s first work with a camera, though, happened much earlier. His formative experiences were as a young teen tangling with his father’s Canon AE-1 camera. Shy and introverted, Randolph soon found comfort in communicating with the world while adjusting a lens.

“I was terrified to approach anyone when I was a kid,” he said. “Photography gave me the confidence I was lacking to interact with people I didn’t know.”

His passion for photography intensified throughout high school and The Art Institute of Fort Lauderdale, from which he graduated in 1994.

Randolph’s professional career began as a photojournalist for three years with The Cadillac Evening News. In 1998, he joined The Bay City Times at the same position before spending the final six of his 13 years there as the publication’s photo editor.

“I can’t underscore how much image-making means to me,” he said. “My hobby is photography.” In his Midland basement, he built a photography dark room, where he processes film with images captured by the old-school analogue cameras he grew up using. When traveling with his wife and daughter, he packs his suitcase with bundles of film to document their trips overseas and across America.

“I have a bucket list, before my passport expires, to hit all seven continents,” he said. Randolph crossed off Asia last summer while accompanying a group of SVSU College of Education faculty and students who visited Kittur, India. The eye-opening experience — shared in a photo essay in the latest issue of Reflections magazine — thrust him into an environment unfamiliar to him. As was the case since childhood, his camera helped better connect Randolph with strangers.

“Westerners are very rare there, so we stood out like a sore thumb,” Randolph said. “The people were friendly, though, and when they saw my camera, they wanted me to take their picture.”
